Eagles soar in this guy's room

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A golden eagle soars over the heads of students in David Ficke's Upland High School classroom. Across the room, a barn owl with a small mouse in its beak peers out at the pupils.

No, Ficke is not letting live animals disrupt his classes, but is letting a little of the outdoors indoors. During the past two years, the biology teacher has stuffed and preserved rodents, small mammals and birds to bring his lessons to life.

"Instead of looking at a stupid picture or not even having a picture, you've got it right here," he explained. "They (students) are naturally inquisitive and interested."

Ficke would eventually like to share his collection with all grade levels in the newly-unified Upland school district. His examples of animals, birds and plants native to Southern California could help all ages, he said.

The eagle, the barn owl and a few other specimens — all from nearby — are "live mounts," stuffed, given glass eyes and mounted in a lifelike position.

Since space in Ficke's classroom is limited, most of his animals and birds have been stuffed with cotton and placed in drawers filled with moth balls.

These less glamorous specimens still help the students learn the coloration, markings and other physical characteristics of the bird or animal, he said.

Ficke has a permit with both the federal and state fish and game agencies to pick up dead animals. The eagle, for instance, was hit by a Boeing 747 jetliner on approach to Ontario International Airport, he said. The plane was temporarily grounded with a dented wing, but the eagle was permanently grounded.

He picked up a sea lion skin on a biology class field trip to Laguna Beach.

Museum director opens world of art to the young

By Mike Krapfl

The workings of 23 abstract artists and 17 fifth-grade minds is not too much imagination in one room for Virginia Eaton. Eaton, the director of Chaffey College's Rex Wignall Museum/Gallery, recently led 17 fifth-graders from Yucca Valley through the museum's current exhibit of works by alumni artists of the Chaffey Joint Union High School District.

Standing before a neon-like watercolor of a boxer painted by Missy Vivencio, Eaton asked the children if the boxer's victory scream was abstract.

Most nodded it was.

"He was on the rocks, dead, so we threw him in the back of a pickup," he said. He later found a 12-inch man-made rubber shark in the sea lion's stomach, he said.

However, Ficke finds most of his subjects the old-fashioned way — by the side of the road.

"A lot of the specimens we get are not in the best condition," he said. "They've been run over a few times."

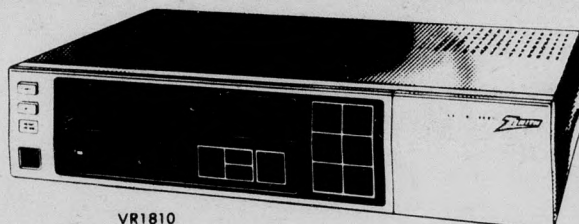

Eventually, Ficke hopes to turn his collection into a school museum. Since the school is presently too crowded, the teacher is looking at establishing a wildlife research station in cooperation with the U.S. Forest Service at Mt. Baldy.

If he can work it out, advanced classes could go there to work on special projects and younger children and the general public could visit to examine specimens and learn about the outdoors.

"How many kids, when they think of environment, think of streets and roads and housing tracts?" he asked.

His unspoken answer was obvious and Ficke would like to change that. □

Why, Eaton asked.
"Because he's not detailed," some of the students said, their response a mimic of a definition of abstraction Eaton had just taught them.

Eaton pointed to the boxer's blood-red gloves and began her next lesson: Symbolism in painting.

Her imaginative tour through the museum and the vocabulary of art, she said, is designed to make students comfortable in what is, for most, a strange place.

"We want to teach the children about art," she said, "but the real purpose is to give students an opportunity to experience the gallery and its contents."

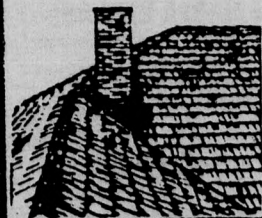

Eaton said she has led as many as 300 students through the gallery experience in a day.

Eaton, who has been director of the museum for nine years, said the children's response depends on the exhibit they see.

500-acre project draws opposition

By Kimberly Heinrichs

About 50 Upland residents brought up traffic and other environmental questions during an informal public hearing last week on the proposed 500-acre San Antonio Lake project.

The hearing was the first of many, city Planning Director Jeff Bloom told residents, mostly neighbors of the project planned east of Campus and west of the city limits, between 17th and 20th streets.

The meeting's purpose was to include residents' concerns in an environmental impact report for the combination residential, commercial and business park planned by The Pennhill Co. of Orange.

The company hopes to take plans for the project before the Planning Commission and City Council this summer, said Doug Boyd, planning consultant to Pennhill. If approved, construction might begin before the end of the year and would take 10 years to complete, he said.

A gravel pit in the middle of the project would be renamed

San Antonio Lake, accommodating fishing, rowboats and sailboats. About 1,600 homes — apartments, townhomes and houses — are proposed. Consultants estimated a maximum of 4,700 people would move in, increasing the city's population by 8 to 10 percent.

Specialty restaurants and stores are proposed to surround the lake, while a highway commercial zone is proposed for a slice of property just north of the proposed Foothill Freeway. A major concern of the residents gathered was realignment of 19th Street and Campus Avenue.

Nineteenth Street is proposed to begin at Euclid Avenue, just south of the Foothill Freeway corridor, veering south through the project and straightening out again to hit Sapphire Street in Rancho Cucamonga, according to a map.

Plans show Campus Avenue curving to the east at 18th Street and hitting the freeway corridor about midway through the project. Developers propose a freeway entrance and exit there, Boyd said.

Residents feared that the curving 19th Street and necessarily slower speed limits would add to traffic on 20th and 21st streets when they are completed. Those living on the current alignments of the streets also asked what would happen to their streets.

Boyd and Doug Wood, an environmental consultant hired by the city, said that these questions would be addressed in the EIR.

Antique cars on menu at library lunch

Rancho Cucamonga Rotary Club members will get a glimpse into the fascinating world of "Antique Cars" from Romero Buick Used Car Sales Manager John Gaddis when they meet for lunch at 11:45 a.m. March 24 at the Magic Lamp Restaurant in Rancho Cucamonga.

Gaddis has been converting old cars into valuable street rods ever since he was in high school. Now the owner of a 1936 Ford coupe, a 1933 two-door Ford sedan and a 1932 Ford roadster, Gaddis is a member of both Street Rods Forever and the National Street Rod Association.

In his presentation Gaddis will talk about all types of collector cars. He'll discuss how to locate the vehicles and parts for them and how they can later be sold at a profit.

Before entering the automotive field in 1979 with a Ford dealership in Lake Havasu, Ariz., Gaddis sold high performance "cruiser" boats, musical instruments and insurance. He joined Romero Buick in 1986 after three years as a new car sales manager for a Glendora Ford dealership.

Gaddis is speaking on behalf of the Romero Speakers Bureau sponsored by Pomona Valley Nissan, Romero Buick and Romero Jeep/Renault. Free programs on a variety of topics are available to area organizations, schools and colleges. For more information, call 985-3960.

Honorary Service Awards presented

Honorary Service Awards were presented at the Feb. 26 meeting of the Deer Canyon School PTA.

The Honorary Service Award is a National PTA Award given to an individual in special recognition of outstanding services to children and youth.

The three ladies who received the award this year were Nancy Salazar, Karen Korkko and Gayle McCracken.

Attention Hearing Aid Users

If you have trouble hearing clearly because of noise interference, contact us about Adaptive Compression*. It's a major breakthrough in hearing aid design that can benefit most hearing aid users — or those in need of a hearing aid. Adaptive Compression is an advanced technology developed by Telex that may not only let you hear but also understand what is being said. You'll be able to understand conversations in a moving car, in a noisy restaurant, at a gathering of people, in the shop, office, or living room — even when the TV is playing.

FREE Hearing Test

Pit bull terriers: killers or cuddly pets?

By Kimberly Heinrichs

To look at Bear, the pit bull terrier nuzzling 15-month-old Chris Acuna in his Alta Loma back yard, one wouldn't think this is the same breed that killed a 4-year-old Georgia boy in November.

Bear and Emily, the Acuna family's two pit bulls, are "just big babies," according to Chris' dad, Cruz.

But the owner of the three Georgia dogs was convicted of manslaughter last month and two Glen Avon residents were arrested two weeks ago for investigation of keeping 25 pit bulls for fighting.

These two incidents are just the latest in a long list of controversies surrounding the breed.

No arrests have been made in about eight years for pit bull fighting in the unincorporated area of San Bernardino County, according to Sgt. Felix D'Amico, who is in charge of the Sheriff's Department vice detail.

"They're probably raising them here, but they're not fighting them here," D'Amico said, adding that if there are fights "they are very, very underground."

However, a Claremont girl was killed in 1983 by a pit bull.

Upland High School honors top scholars

The administration and teaching staff of Upland High School have announced the names of the most outstanding scholars of the Class of 1987.

Catherine Antoniak is the valedictorian. She also is a finalist in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

Co-salutatorians are Lisa Derby, Robert Dudley and Giao Duang.

Selections were made by a faculty committee representing academic departments, and were based on grade point average, academic accomplishment in the most demanding courses in the curriculum and Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

These students will be honored at the awards program and commencement exercises June 9, along with other outstanding seniors who have achieved life membership in the honor society, California Scholarship Federation.

Art show, sale planned

An art show and acution will be held Saturday at Cecilia's Catering, 662 E. Foothill Blvd., Upland. The exhibition is at 7 p.m. and the auction at 8 p.m.

Hors d'oeuvres, dessert, coffee, punch, wine, and a no-host bar will be available.

The donation is $3 per person. For more information call Debbie Sassaman at 987-2998.

The Acunas adopted Bear, a pit bull about 2 years old, from the Upland Animal Shelter. Acuna, who has owned various pit bulls over several years, said people are initially afraid of the dogs.

"Right away it's, 'Oh, you own one of those dogs,'" he said. "But they're really just big babies. Most people just haven't been around them."

The Upland adoption agency, Promote Animal Welfare and Safety, is one of the few in the area willing to put pit bulls up for adoption.

"I think with any animal there can be viciousness, especially if they're taught," said Lori Howard of PAWS. "I think it has nothing to do with the breed. There is no breed born mean."

The shelter has been getting about six of the pit bulls a month since it opened last fall and all have been adopted without incident, she said.

But the board of the Humane Society of Pomona Valley in Pomona voted in 1984 to stop handling adoptions for the breed after the society's building was burglarized and pit bulls stolen 15 times in a six-week period, Executive Director William Harford said.

"At that time we were getting a tremendous amount of complaints about pit bull fights going on in alley ways, going on after school, going on behind schools," Harford said.

The dogs came back to the shelter scarred and maimed, he said. It is more merciful to put the dogs to sleep than to let them be adopted and used for fighting, he said.

In 1980, the West End Shelter For Animals made a similar decision not to accept pit bulls, unless the owners specifically wanted them put to sleep. General Manager Betty Fryman cited burglaries, fights with other dogs and liability insurance problems as the reasons for the decision.

Harford agreed with Acuna that pit bulls can make good pets. In fact, Harford said the society has kept Dolly, a pit bull "as cuddly as a teddy bear," since the death of its elderly owner, a humane society contributor.

"I think the pit bull is an outstanding breed of dog," Harford said. "The trouble is I don't like the people who own them, especially those that want to fight them."

Harford said families like the Acunas do not usually want to adopt the breed because of the negative publicity surrounding them. He said most of those requesting the dogs are young males who want the dog as a "macho status symbol."

Still, those familiar with the dogs are divided over whether fighting is part of the breed's traits or whether it is merely a matter of training.

Veterinarian Eileen Omstead

of Rancho Cucamonga said the dogs are more dangerous when they attack because of their extreme strength, particularly in their cheek muscles.

"If they clamp down they won't let go," she said, adding that the pit bull has no special mechanism to do that, just years of breeding to fight.

But D'Amico, who owns a pit bull-golden retriever mix, insisted it has nothing to do with breeding.

"It's who owns them," he said. "All they are is dogs."

NEW SPRING FASHIONS HAVE ARRIVED!!

Woman leads adventurous, grueling life

By Suzanne Sproul

Judy Moore has to deal with an interesting balancing act daily — spending time with her husband and six children while pursuing her medical school studies.

The Alta Loma woman recently returned to school after 15 years of being a homemaker.

"My husband went to law school and we were used to living on no money, so I thought now that his career is going well we could just relax. I became interested in nursing and I took classes at Chaffey College but I realized I wanted to be a doctor instead.

"My husband was the one who encouraged me to pursue whatever I wanted," she said, sitting in her living room surrounded by her supportive family.

Moore graduated from Brigham Young University magna cum laude 15 years ago with a university studies degree.

"I've always been a homemaker and I was happy doing that. But then I wanted to be a doctor. I really like women and although most male doctors try very hard, they just don't understand the feelings of women and mothers," she said.

Moore's day at the College of Osteopathic Medicine of the Pacific starts at about 8 a.m. and ends at 5 p.m. And in between she tries to satisfy the needs of her children, ages 4 to 14.

"I've always been home and this year I was very nervous during the first day of school. I wanted to be home to hear about each of their days, but I was at school. I think there's an advantage to having so many children. They help take care of each other," she said.

"I try to be here when the kids are here and Judy is at school. We work the scheduling out together," said Doug Moore.

Moore helps with the cooking and the children (Monica, Tina, Tonya, Jason, Tommy and Shane) help wherever they can.

Since her children's activities keep her busy as well, Mrs. Moore usually begins studying at 4 a.m. when the house is quiet.

"I've been blessed a lot. The Lord has been good to me and I couldn't have done this without the help and support of Doug and the family.

"My family absolutely comes first and that was something I worried about, but Doug and I talked about it and decided I should try and do what I wanted," Mrs. Moore said.

Before she begins her career, Mrs. Moore will have to complete four years of medical school, one year of an internship and two years of residency.

Builder allegedly misled council

By Mike Krapfl

A local developer misled the Rancho Cucamonga City Council when he tried to convince it to allow him to build Etiwanda's first shopping center, city officials said last week.

City Manager Lauren Wasserman said Andy Barmakian, owner of the Barmakian Co. in Rancho Cucamonga, apparently misrepresented the results of a traffic report he presented to the council.

Mayor Dennis Stout said he was "furious" about the revelation.

Barmakian could not be reached for comment and others in his office refused to comment on the allegations.

The traffic engineer Barmakian hired to complete the report, however, responded to the city's allegations by saying "I don't take any responsibility for what the developer said or presented to the City Council."

Clyde Sweet, the manager of the traffic division for Ludwig Engineering in San Bernardino, said "it was a technical report and the data can be misinterpreted."

The report he handed to Barmakian, Sweet said, was a study of what could theoretically be done to make Etiwanda Avenue efficiently carry the traffic produced by Barmakian's shopping center when the city is built out.

In his presentation to the council, Barmakian said the report indicated what would have to be done — whether or not Barmakian built his shopping center — to make Etiwanda a safe and free-flowing avenue.

Russ Maguire, Rancho Cucamonga's city engineer, said Barmakian's report to the council apparently used altered maps to advocate placing a signal and intersection at the entrance of Barmakian's proposed shopping center 300 feet north of Base Line Road.

The proposed signal and intersection, he said, would be similar to the intersection of Foothill Boulevard and Mountain Avenue.

"No city engineer would approve of something like that 300 feet north of Base Line Road," Maguire said.

Maguire said Barmakian's presentation of the report to the council "was a misunderstanding at least."

Stout said the alleged misrepresentation "is outrageous, especially given the fact this was a very controversial project."

Councilman Jeff King, who has a record of supporting Barmakian projects, responded to staff reports of the allegations by saying "chances are it's a mix-up."

"I highly doubt anybody doctored reports," he said. "I would be shocked if they had."

Councilwoman Deborah Brown said "I can't say I'm all that surprised, but I am disappointed one of our hometown developers would pull a stunt like that."

Council members Chuck Buquet and Pamela Wright both said they will see that the matter is investigated further.

Professor honored at Cal Poly

Cal Poly Professor of Aerospace Engineering Dr. Conrad F. Newberry has been awarded the 1986-87 John Leland Atwood award for outstanding contributions to aerospace education.

Newberry is a full-time professor at California State Polytechnic University Pomona and a part-time engineer at Rockwell International Corporation's home of the Space Shuttle in Downey. He is a member of the STS Aero Sciences department at the company's Space Transportation Systems Division.

The $2,000 award is presented annually by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) and the Aerospace Division of the American Society for Engineering in Education (ASEE).

During the past 23 years at Cal Poly Newberry has taught, at one time or another, most of the 30 or so aerospace design and engineering classes offered and has been active in the engineering education committees of two national engineering professional societies.

The Atwood award was presented to Newberry, "for his ceaseless efforts to promote professionalism within design education, and for establishing, coordinating and maintaining aircraft design education dialogue among design educators and industry designers."

H.O.T. Tips

(House of Tools)

You can burn your fingers easily when sanding bowls or in sanding other lathe work. There is a way to avoid this and that way is to cut sanding blocks from sheets of 1/2 in. thick rubbing felt. The felt sanding blocks shape themselves to shallow curves and can be deliberately shaped to match more elaborate forms.

Rubbing felt is available in 1 ft. squares from finishing supply outlets. A similar material, used for typewriter cushions, is available from office machine suppliers. Cut the block with a razor knife and rule. One block lasts indefinitely. The problem of a deeply nicked jointer knife can be solved by keeping an extra set of blades on hand and replacing only one nicked knife with one from the spare set. Replacing one knife at a time saves on set-up time and extends the life of the knives between sharpenings. Of course, all knives in both sets should be sharpened at once and ground to the same size.

SCAG board opposes AQMD make-up plan

The San Bernardino Associated Governments' executive board has voted to oppose legislation that may eliminate representation by elected officials on the board of the South Coast Air Quality Management District.

The legislation by state Sen. Robert Presley, D-Riverside, would reduce the AQMD board from 14 to 7 members and not guarantee that any of the board positions would be filled by elected city or county officials. Currently, 11 of 14 of the AQMD's board members are elected officials.

SANBAG's request that elected official representation be maintained joins similar requests by the boards of supervisors in San Bernardino and Orange counties, as well as the AQMD board itself.

Presley has called the resolutions of opposition "premature" because the bill is still being finalized in preparation for committee hearings later this month.

Yardbusters give the terminally ill a hand

When a terminal illness involves a family, everything seems to stop except the lawn which keeps growing.

And weeds, knowing they won't be bothered, appear to declare a free-for-all on the property.

To help families during this difficult time, employee volunteers from General Telephone Co.'s Pomona Valley Division have formed the Yardbusters.

Headed by Dean Parker, they consider the overgrown lawn problems of the terminally ill serious business and have more than a year's worth of blisters and calluses to prove how much they care.

Working through the Inland Hospice Association, a Pomona-based non-profit organization that offers support services to terminally ill patients and their families, these self-proclaimed Yardbusters — often accompanied by their children — have already helped several local families by taking away the irritant of yardwork and giving them more time to spend coping with a prolonged or terminal health reality.

"People who are experiencing a terminal illness in the family or a prolonged and incapacitating health problem just don't have time to worry about yardwork," said Parker. "They have a lot of other more important considerations.

"And yet, neglecting yard work during a time of family crisis can lead to more problems for them. I know of cases where neighbors, people who were once considered friends, became adversaries due to unsightly yards. Other times neighbors called the health department which issued citations to clean up an unkempt yard."

While Saturdays are normally days off for most, Parker's group of GTE regulars like Lil Bribiesca, Chris Swengel, Bob Sensel, Oscar Pearson, Judy Perkins and wife, Dana Parker, actually looks forward to putting in several hours cleaning up other people's yards on that day.

"We did our first yard cleanup about a year and a half ago for a friend whose husband was dying of cancer. It was just a group of GTE employees who wanted to do something to help. As it turned out, we had a good time helping out and everyone enjoyed the experience."

"I asked all of them what they thought about doing this on a regular basis, and we all agreed it was worthwhile."

Parker's motivation, however personal, was commended.

"Watching him die really hit me hard, and the feeling there was nothing I could do to change things didn't help any. I couldn't watch anyone die like that again, and I decided I wanted to help somebody, especially people with similar problems.

"If cleaning up the yards of people in these circumstances could be of help, then that's what I would do for them."

Parker took his idea to his superiors at General Telephone and met a minor obstacle. No aid could be given to an individual. However, aid was possible if channeled through a non-profit organization.

"I started knocking on doors," Parker admits, "and I was fortunate enough to contact the Inland Hospice and get a positive reception to my idea."

His involvement with the agency which now handles all referrals to his group has since landed volunteer incentive grants of $500 and $1,500 from General Telephone to assist in purchasing materials for his group's efforts.

"We're quite proud of the community spirit displayed by this group of General Telephone employee volunteers," said Harold R. Nelms, vice president and general manager of the company's southern area.

"Their willingness to undertake such an effort on their own time for the good of others is commendable. The Yardbusters are a credit to GTE and the community."

Study intended to identify best freeway design

By Patrick McGreevy

A two-year study is under way to identify the best design for the proposed $500 million Foothill Freeway extension and to address environmental concerns.

That announcement was made in Rancho Cucamonga to the Route 30 Corridor Group, which consists of representatives of cities and counties within the path of the 28-mile freeway.

At the same meeting, a regional planner said he is confident the project's funding can be raised through a combination of state and federal funds, assessments and revenue from a half-cent addition to the county's sales tax.

"The sales tax increase is absolutely crucial to this route more than it is to any other route in the county," said Wes McDaniel, executive director of the San Bernardino Associated Governments.

The $996,792 cost of the design and environmental studies has already been secured from state and local sources.

Consultant Donald Capelle said that after months of delays, Caltrans has signed the study contract with his firm and work has begun.

"Our goal is to identify the alternatives (designs) that are most appropriate for this corridor and do an evaluation of how well they meet the needs of this particular corridor," Capelle told the corridor group.

The freeway would stretch from San Bernardino to La Verne through the northern portions of Fontana, Rancho Cucamonga and Upland.

"We will have to take into consideration local concern because there will be a local impact. Some of it will be positive and some of it will be negative," he said.

Capelle estimated that the initial study will be ready in 18 months for comments from government agencies and the public.

Another six months will be spent revising the draft study based on the input and another year will be spent in public hearings and revisions before a final environmental impact study and project design can be approved by Caltrans.

Local officials at last week's meeting said a critical element of the study will be the analysis of funding sources for the freeway project.

Builders parking it in park-hungry R.C. these days

Park construction is increasingly adding to the din of housing and street work heard throughout Rancho Cucamonga.

The young city, in fact, now is building more parks than all the other cities in San Bernardino County combined, according to a recent survey by the city's community services director.

Bill Holley said the 105.5 acres of parks under development in Rancho Cucamonga is 53 percent of the 199.5 acres being developed in the county's 17 cities.

Holley said he did the survey at the request of the city's Park Development Commission.

He has his roots firmly planted with S.B. County

By Lori Moody

What Dr. Ruth has done for sex, the Master Gardener can do for one's failing ficus.

Through a program offered by the University of California Cooperative Extension and San Bernardino County, those with brown thumbs are just a telephone call away from learning why their lemons look like limes or how to unsnare their lawns from the clutches of crabgrass.

"We're here to help the regular back yard farmer," said James Zyvoloski, a retired letter carrier and one of several volunteer master gardeners in the county.

Zyvoloski and Irene Robertson, a retired nurse, take turns fielding gardening inquiries on Monday and Thursday afternoons in an office located in the county Agriculture Department in Ontario. Other Master Gardener offices are located in San Bernardino and Apple Valley.

Many calls are from newly arrived residents who want to know what type of plants do best in the area. Others are seeking solutions to particular problems, like locating hops to make homemade beer.

On other occasions, home gardeners bring the problem, such as an infected plant or unknown bug, directly to Robertson or Zyvoloski.

Many problems just take a little detective work, Zyvoloski said.

"Sure you can read ... books," he said, "(but) your particular problem is not in the books."

If neither Robertson nor Zyvoloski can answer a question, they'll find someone who can.

"If I don't know the answer I'll check it out and I'll call back," Robertson said. "We have quite a bit of literature. If I really get stumped, I'll call the boss ... 99 percent of the questions can be answered."

The Master Gardener program has met with success since it began in 1984 in San Bernardino County, said Jane Hartin, cooperative extension horticulture adviser.

Similar master gardener programs are operating in other counties, including Los Angeles and Riverside.

The horticulture advisers are employees of the University of California. The county provides a secretary, office space, a vehicle and travel expenses. The federal government also provides a percentage of the funding.

Master Gardener participants need not have an extensive gardening background, Hartin said.

Individuals complete a 50-hour course taught by extension professionals in horticulture-related areas, including house plants, growing vegetables and fruit trees, insect and weed control, pruning, soils and irrigation.

The program is offered once a year at no charge. But in return, participants volunteer at least 50 hours over the course of a year providing services to the public.

Besides answering gardening questions by telephone, volunteers participate in workshops at educational fairs, distribute publications and present plant seminars.

Once the 50-hours of volunteer work are completed, individuals are certified and can receive advance horticulture training.

Zyvoloski, an avid gardener for much of his life, said the program has been "extremely rewarding."

Robertson agreed. "As long as they want me, I'll continue," she said.

The Ontario office of Master Gardener can be reached by calling 391-7526 between 1 and 5 p.m. Monday and Thursday. Master Gardener in San Bernardino is available by calling 387-2171 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday and Tuesday and from 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday.

Those interested in participating in the program can obtain further information by calling the San Bernardino telephone number.

Humanity United Group is there for those lost in closure shuffle

By Mike Krapfl

When the West Valley's migrant labor camp closes next month, the Humanity United Group will be waiting at the gates to embrace the displaced residents and their problems.

HUG is an ecumenical coalition of churchgoers, educators and Hispanics dedicated to helping the 17 families still living in the San Gabriel Valley Labor Association Camp in Rancho Cucamonga, the group's president said last week.

Paul Gomez, explaining HUG's philosophy during an informal meeting of some of the group's 30 members, said "we're not political organizers out on a crusade, we're humanitarians trying to help real people."

The people remaining in the labor camp have a very real problem: The camp — which is the only American home many of the older residents and most of the children there have known — has grown obsolete in a no-longer-agricultural West Valley.

The camp is to be vacated by April 9 so the new owner, Edward Halvajian of Newport Beach, can level the dusty barracks there and build homes.

Although given 60 days to find a new home, most of the residents have said they don't want to move and can't afford to.

"So our immediate goal," HUG member Clayton Trejo said, "is to find immediate shelter for as many of the families as we can."

He said the group is looking to churches, service groups and concerned citizens for help.

Carmen Myers, perhaps the most vocal member of HUG, said the group is concentrating on finding private sponsors for the families because of the new immigration laws.

The new laws prevent the families from applying for government assistance because it could leave them ineligible for the amnesty clause of the new law.

The clause allows illegal immigrants who have lived in the United States continuously without welfare or other government aid since 1982 to remain legally.

Myers said all those living in the camp are eligible for amnesty.

"And we want to emphasize," she said, "most of the children living in the camp were born in this country."

"Those children are very concerned about what's happening," said Fran Nuelle, a HUG member who teaches many of the camp's children at Bear Gulch Elementary School.

Demand for food grips area hunger programs

By Kimberly Heinrichs

West Valley hunger programs are struggling to keep up with the demand for food.

"In the last five years there has been a dramatic increase" in the need for food, said the Rev. Mary Margaret Bever, director of the Pomona Valley Council of Churches Hunger Program.

A variety of churches and organizations offer food in this area, she said, but many residents still go hungry.

"The problem is, in (the West Valley) there are so many small ones (sources of help) and there's not often a lot of communication between them," she said. "I just don't think there is any community in the United States that meets all its needs."

Bever's program operates three food distribution centers in Ontario, Pomona and La Verne. The centers provide government surplus food and canned and dry goods once every three months to those with referrals from their county social services departments, she said.

In 1985 the program fed 6,142 households; in 1986 that had increased 9 percent to 6,142, she said.

Sova East, an Ontario food pantry run by a Jewish student group at the Claremont Colleges, saw the most clients during February, the shortest month since they opened last April, said coordinator Rita Wodinsky. She said 645 people have passed through Sova East's doors since it opened and 133 of those came last month.

"There seem to be more," Wodinsky said. "Probably we're not meeting their needs because we can't give it to them every week."

"The existing programs I feel do not meet all their needs," agreed Faye Pointer, resource developer for San Bernardino County Social Services. "I would like to see some coordinated effort with a large distribution-type system within the area."

Bever said she is interested in starting a coalition of food pantries in the area, with information and training on other welfare programs made available.

"Only about one-half of the people who are eligible for food stamps get them," she said, and many of the volunteers don't know how to hook up the hungry with that program.

The recent surge of hungry people may go hand in hand with the increase in homelessness, said Ontario Salvation Army social worker Marilyn Brinkworth.

"It seems to be skyrocketing, especially for shelter and rental assistance," Brinkworth said. "They usually need food in addition."

Those needing food run the gamut from transients to the chronically unemployed to those simply down on their luck, the volunteers said.

"I see more families that suddenly don't have a home," said Esther Billings, who started the Emergency Food Group 20 years ago. "I've been taking (food) up to the big houses. Sometimes they find themselves without food and money," the Rancho Cucamonga resident said.

Although some clients use the service one time, more are starting to be regulars — some even coming back before the three-month deadline, the volunteers said. Brinkworth said some Salvation Army clients are content to make the rounds for food, without trying to change their lifestyle.

"To me if you're hungry and your family's hungry you can do anything — clean yards — to survive. Some people would rather starve," she said. "People have to try to help themselves."

But like the others, Brinkworth said the majority of the hungry are not dependent on donations, just temporarily desperate.

"I'd say the greatest number truly need help," she said.

Calico Rompers to dance

The Calico Rompers Square Dance Club will hold their "Leprachaun Leap" dance on Friday at the Pomona Moose Lodge, 300 S. San Antonio, Pomona, 8-11 p.m. with John Harrison doing the calling.

Rifts seen coming from guidelines

By Marianne Aiken

West Valley educators said last week new sex education guidelines approved by the state Board of Education are likely to divide their communities.

Most said they hadn't received information from Sacramento about the guidelines, approved March 11, which cover homosexuality, AIDS, abortion and contraception, and thus were hesitant to comment.

But they admitted the subject is going to be a difficult one to teach.

"This is a red-hot item," said Etiwanda School District Superintendent Carleton Lightfoot. "It's going to be one hell of a job."

The "family life" guidelines approved 6-4 do not require school districts to teach about sex-related issues. School boards can follow, change or reject them.

Cucamonga School District Superintendent John Costello said he would take the guidelines to the board in April.

Costello said he thought sex education is better handled in high schools.

Although the guidelines suggest sex education be part of an overall health program that starts in the elementary grades as early as the fourth grade, Costello said he prefers it to be offered later.

Lightfoot also had some concerns about introducing sex-related issues to elementary school-aged youngsters.

"How can you talk about abortion in the fifth grade without having a dividing line right down the community?" Lightfoot said. "It's going to be a difficult task to accomplish to give information to our youngsters that we want them to know, but we have to be sensitive to their beliefs and the beliefs of their parents."

The guidelines also recommend that discussions of homosexuality begin in the seventh grade, followed by more comprehensive education in high school.

It is always difficult for schools to strike a balance between addressing the teaching basic skills — reading, writing and computing — and larger societal issues, Costello said.

"There needs to be a balance created in schools so we don't miss what our primary mission is," he said.

New headteacher named at infant, day care center

The first Steps Infant and Day Care Center in Montclair appointed a new headteacher, Ms. Patricia Edwards. She has her education from Marymount College, and will instruct the four and five year olds. She will stress Highscope, a curriculum emphasis that addresses the whole child in all areas. All class teachers will teach according to this method.

Ms. Edwards works under the guidance of the director, Ms. Eileen McDermott, who adopted Highscope for the school, since it fits in with the scope and goals of the center.

First Steps has an Infant Room with 10 babies from six weeks to two years, a room with two year olds, who are being potty trained, a class of three year olds, and the above mentioned class of four and five year old youngsters.

The center was originally envisioned by a grandmother, who coveted for her grandchildren the kind of care that makes children comfortable and loved, with plenty of room to grow. This grandmother went back to college to get her degree in early childhood education and preschool administration. Then she inspired the United Methodist Church of Montclair into providing for the community the child care that contributes to all aspects of a child's development. But most of all, she wanted a loving, caring place, and even though she is retired now, her goals are still the goals of the school.

The undergirding love and concern is enhanced by the more formalized structure of Highscope, whereby different areas are set up for different activities, and the children do not move from one to the other without first cleaning up the area they play in. They also learn to verbalize about their actions.

Caring is taught. The plight of the cystic fibrosis children was explained to the preschoolers, and their help was enlisted. They held a mini march for Cystic Fibrosis, and collected $720.

The center is located at 9950 Fremont in Montclair.

NOTICE OF DEATH OF FRANCES M. BRADD, aka FRANCES MARY BRADD

AND OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE CASE NO. PW-5353

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate of: FRANCES M. BRADD, aka FRANCES MARY BRADD.

A petition has been filed by GEORGE S. BRADD in the Superior Court of San Bernardino County requesting that GEORGE S. BRADD be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration Act.

A hearing on the petition will be held on April 6, 1987 at 8:30 A.M. in Dept.: 4-RC, located at 8303 Haven Avenue, Rancho Cucamonga, California 91730.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court or present it to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 700 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may serve upon the executor or administrator, or upon the attorney for the executor or administrator, and file with the court with proof of service, a written request stating that you desire special notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of the petitions or accounts mentioned in sections 1200 and 1200.5 of the California Probate Code.
